-The design reflects the motivations csf by defualting to a leaderboard page, immediately comparing the user to others, it also will consist of a bare minimum number of pages that are all connected via three bottom buttons making for an easy, comprehensive and focused information processing experience. Most pages will consist of at most four UI interactive buttons, all self labeled as to what they do/where they lead, other than the Home Gym Page where users will be allowed to set their home gym location to a new facility in which I'll probably introduce a pop up that guides them through this process. I'm essentially attempting to provide the bare minimum amount of interactive features so as to not intimidate a user, but to display their info, their facilities info and who to go about changing their facility. A top 25 leaderboard should be easy for most to grasp, and having a limited number of paths via buttons that all loop to one another (for the most part) should make the software very self explanatory for most.
